Hours: 37.5 hours per week (negotiable for the right candidate)

Contract: 1 year fixed-term contract with possibility of extension

Salary: £29,000 per annum

Location: Home based in Scotland with travel for meetings, events and farm visits

The Nature Friendly Farming Network (NFFN) is an organisation for farmers, crofters and the public led by nature-friendly farmers across the UK.

We support farmers on their nature-friendly farming journeys and demonstrate to policy makers and the wider public what farmers and crofters can do to help nature and the climate, whilst still producing plentiful quality produce. Farmers and crofters are key to addressing the climate crisis and biodiversity decline; urgent policy support is needed to take nature-friendly farming to scale.

For this role, we're looking for a professional, persuasive and engaging individual with a sound understanding of current agricultural policy and a good practical knowledge of farming and crofting in Scotland. The successful applicant will also have the skills to engage with farmers and crofters through a series of on-farm and online events to grow the network and spread nature friendly practices.

The successful candidate will also have the skills and knowledge to increase farmer, crofter and public awareness and understanding of nature-friendly farming by effectively communicating the work of the NFFN to a range of audiences.

The post-holder will work closely with the NFFN Scotland Manager as well as other NFFN staff involved in the farmer and public engagement strands of the NFFN's strategy. Based in Scotland and willing to travel to farms, meetings and events when needed, the successful applicant must have a full clean driving licence.

The Sustainable Farming Officer will be part of NFFN's Scotland's team and work closely with the farmer-led steering group. The team and steering group work in tandem across Scotland engaging in agriculture policy and knowledge sharing, and working closely with farmers, crofters and other staff.
