

Pesticides

Existing farm practices often rely on the heavy use of chemical pesticides and herbicides which have a profound impact on biodiversity and public health. Given the benefits that many insect species provide to farm businesses as well as ecosystems, NFFN wants to see a significant and pragmatic overall reduction in pesticide use. Interventions could include going organic, introducing Integrated Pest Management, or using precision technology and equipment for a highly targeted approach.